Sacred Journey

Our home now contains almost ALL Young Living essential oils and supplements to keep us well and deal with the day-to-day health issues and immune boosting that is needed. Thieves household cleaner is a staple here.

Prior to Young Living, our sweet little Boston Terrier, Roxanne Star suddenly became gravely ill. We went to several veterinarianians and Vet Hospitals to try to obtain a correct diagnosis.

I was referred to a "Chinese Eastern Veteranarian" who is well known in the Metro area and is published for making his own Herbal formulas and Accupuncture as well as combining Western medicine when necessary.

Roxanne went in to see the vet and stayed overnight, we didn't feel she would come home...she was 6 years old. I picked her up the next morning and she came home. Roxanne would live to 14 - ½ years, almost 15 years. We said that she had the nine lives of a cat. She had to deal with a lot of LUPUS related immune suppressive symptoms. Our vet who had saved her life was not comfortable with these new essential oils and (Animal Scents) products that we were using and was emphatic that I wasn't to use them with Roxanne. I did from time to time with good results but mostly trusted this Doctor and followed his requirements in her treatment for fear of adversely impacting her health. Last year on August 9th I made the choice along with Roxanne to let her go home. She was blind and deaf and was down to a mere 10 plus lbs from 18 lbs....it was very hard to let her go but it was her time.

The other day I came across unopened eye drops, body creams, medicated shampoos ...all in plastic containers....I haven't gotten rid of them because I don't want to harm the environment. There are a few recommendations on the web about getting rid of these medications. I don't feel like I have found a comfortable answer. Even if I take them somewhere, how are they being disposed of?

I would like guidance regarding this issue so that I know how to let other people know as well.

Our Kaylarae Lynne is a 19 month old Pomeranian, 9 lbs. or so and our joy! I now have an ADR and after doing the 1st booster shots at 12 weeks, her initial rabies shot and one heart worming, I plan to educate myself to respect her body and support her wellness with YOUNG LIVING and organic products.
